Course Description:

This course is appropriate for a broad range of majors. Extending expository writing from College Composition to academic and professional settings, the course focuses on argument and persuasion, and teaches students how to adjust ideas in their own areas of study to a variety of audiences, as well as how to conduct research, how to use evidence persuasively, and how to do group work, and peer editing. Assignments include a cover letter (for a job or graduate school application), a personal statement about professional aspirations, a project proposal, a plan to engage community involvement in an aspect of a student's area of study, and an academic research paper.

Course Goals:

Students should expect to learn the following:

- ♦ Develop essays around a thesis statement, and main points around clearly stated arguments, supported with sufficient/relevant information.
- ♦ Organize essays around an appropriate sequence of ideas, a logical order.
- ♦ Conduct research in journals of their field, analyze and evaluate arguments.
- ♦ Use evidence persuasively.
- ♦ Adapt each essay to appropriate audiences.

Required Textbook:

While there are no assigned textbooks for this course, there will be required readings—handouts you will receive in class. You will also be consulting a number of online sites designed to help college students with research, essay formats and writing strategies, as well as quick checks on grammar and syntax.

Required Assignments:

Course requirements include 5 formal essays, and daily informal writing in and out of the classroom. To earn a passing grade in this course, you must meet the following requirements: complete all 5 formal assignments; write a total of a minimum 20 pages of formal writing; write at least two essays that are a minimum of 6 pages each and revised substantively based on feedback by peers and by the instructor. There will also be some presentations in class sometime. There will be no midterm or final exam in this class.
