Course Description:

Traditionally, much of psychology has been concerned with the question: “What is wrong with you and how do we fix it?” Positive psychology asks a very different question: “What is right with you and how do we promote it?”

This course will emphasize recent research findings and theoretical advances in positive psychology. This course is about human flourishing. The course is designed to introduce students to the current research designs, techniques, research findings, and theories in positive psychology. The course is also designed to allow students to experience some of the interventions and strategies used in positive psychology in a personal way. In other words, this course involves both a study of positive psychology as well as an experiential involvement in this field. Students will learn about their personal strengths and acquire the tools, based on empirically-validated methods, to enhance their own subjective well-being.

Required Text:

A detailed overview of the different areas and techniques of positive psychology will be provided in lectures and the assigned textbook: The How of Happiness: A Scientific Approach to Getting the Life You Want, by Sonja Lyubomirsky (ISBN 159420148X, 9781594201486). Additionally, students will be responsible for presenting a poster in class that outlines a recent journal article that investigates an intervention.

You will be expected to complete each day’s reading assignment prior to each lecture. Lectures will cover some (but not all) of the main points in the readings but lecture will primarily provide material in addition to the text. You are responsible for both the textbook material and the lecture material. In some cases, it may be difficult to follow the lecture if you have not completed the assigned reading prior to the lecture. Please keep up with the readings as this course will move very quickly, and you will fall behind if you leave the readings for the weekends.

Grading Policy:

Your grade will be based on two midterm exams, a poster presentation, a final exam, an identity box, and a positive psychology “play” book you will create. The final exam consists of a single in-class essay in response to the following instruction:

Based on the empirical research in positive psychology, describe a series of interventions personalized for you, to produce an enduring increase in your subjective well-being. Use theory and research findings to support these interventions. Include in your answer strategies that you would not include in your personalized intervention and provide the rationale for not including them.

The poster presentation will be a 3-4 min presentation each student will do to present a recent article on positive psychology. Professor will grade your poster presentation for both content (i.e., depth, how you discuss, integrate and evaluate research from a recent peer-reviewed journal, original thought, and relating your topic to theories) and presentation (e.g., your overall framework, clarity, attractiveness, accessibility, creativity, and originality). Additionally, on your poster presentation you will outline an exercise, related to the paper you are presenting, designed to enhance well-being. Professor will give several presentations in class, which you can use as templates to help develop your own presentation.

The identity box is a task where students create a virtual or real box that displays their strengths and present this to the class. It is designed to enhance your social relations, allow you to be creative, give you an opportunity to better understand yourself and your classmates.

The playbook is a series of tasks (e.g., completing a questionnaire and reflecting on it to increase your understanding of yourself and increase your happiness) that you must complete.

The breakdown of the marks is as follows: Midterm 1 (10%), Midterm 2 (15%), Poster Presentation (20%), “play” book (15%), identity box (5%), and final exam final (35%).

You will receive numerical grades for each of the exams. Your final grade will be the cumulative score of each quiz and exam multiplied by its percentage of weight.

Grading Scale:

Assignments and examinations will be graded according to the following grade scale:

A	90-100	C+	72-74
A-	85-89	C	68-71
B+	82-84	C-	64-67

B	78-81	D	60-63
B-	75-77	F	below 60

Academic Honesty:

Academic dishonesty includes any effort to take credit for work you did not do. Plagiarism is also a form of academic dishonesty. Although we do not have writing assignments for this course, please be aware that plagiarism (failing to cite sources appropriately) is considered a serious violation of standards. If our staff detects academic dishonesty of any sort you will receive a failing grade for the assignment in question.
