Course Goals:

1. Doing History: In this course, we will devote the majority of our time to hands-on historical analysis. All of us, as resident historians, rather than me as the "expert professor" will learn to practice the historian's craft together. In doing so, we will come to understand not only the past but also the world we live in today.

2. Depth versus Breadth: Rather than a broad survey, we will use an in-depth, case-study approach to explore key topics in American history since 1865. Think of this class as a workshop similar to a research lab where we will investigate essential questions in American history.
3. Thematic Focus: Throughout the semester we will highlight two key themes. First, in the words of Eric Foner (our textbook editor), we will emphasize “a question as old as the republic and as current at today’s newspapers: ‘Who is an American?’” Second, we will investigate the relationship between the nation’s founding ideals of “freedom and equality” for all and the daily lived realities of ordinary Americans. As historians, we can take a close look at how and why these notions have changed over time and what they might teach us about current events.

Learning Outcomes: By the end of this course, you should be able to:

- Identify and analyze primary sources
- Comprehend and evaluate secondary readings including on-line web sites
- Illustrate an understanding of historiography
- Effectively present your ideas orally and in writing
- Use primary and secondary evidence to make credible, historical arguments
- Understand and apply proper attribution and citation tools
- Know the key facts, themes, and turning points in American history since 1865

Course Policies:

Participation – Every Online Activity is important. We will be working together to meet our course goals and learning outcomes, and we do not want you to miss out.

E-mail – Each class email is important. You are responsible for all e-mail communications sent by your instructor and your classmates to your BSU e-mail account. It is important that you check your BSU e-mail at least every other day so that you do not miss important communications from your instructor and classmates.

Special Circumstances – Bridgewater State University is committed to ensuring equal academic opportunities and inclusion for students. If you have any special circumstances that might impact your participation, success, and/or comfort in class, please contact the instructor as soon as possible. These may include (but are not limited to) having a documented disability, involvement in upcoming religious observances, and speaking English as a second language.

Any student who due to a documented disability needs special accommodations to participate in class and/or complete assignments should contact the instructor during the add/drop period so that reasonable accommodations can be made. If you have not done so already, please register with the Disabilities Resources Office in the Academic Achievement Center, which is responsible for coordinating accommodations and services for students with disabilities.

Our course Learning Management System, Blackboard, was “designed and developed in accordance with the internationally recognized Web Content Accessibility (WCAG) Guidelines 2.0 Level AA as well as the Section 508 standards in the United States” according to the Blackboard Accessibility web site.

Academic Integrity – “Students are admitted to Bridgewater State University with the expectation that they will accept and abide by the standards of conduct and scholarship established by the faculty, administration and student governing boards. The university reserves the right to require students to withdraw who do not maintain acceptable academic standing. The university also reserves the right to dismiss, with due process, students who do not meet the requirements of conduct and order or whose behavior is inconsistent with the standards of the university. ” – excerpted from the Academic Integrity Policy.

Title IX and Sexual Violence

The Office of Equal Opportunity and the Title IX Coordinator work to ensure that all members of the campus community flourish in a supportive and fair climate. Visit their support site to learn more regarding all resources for victim-survivors. Resources include steps to take to report sexual and relationship violence and/or to seek alternative forms of aid.

Technical Issues – Back up course work often, for you are responsible for course work lost to technical difficulties. When contributing to Blackboard discussion assignments or lengthy essay exam questions, consider composing your work in Microsoft Word and then copying and pasting the text into Blackboard.

If there are system-wide issues with Blackboard or BSU email, the instructor will contact you via email to provide you with an alternative means of completing course assignments or due date extensions. If you experience individual technical issues, please contact the IT Service Center and provide as many details, including screenshots if possible so that the IT Service Center can assist you.

Netiquette – Before posting to a course discussion forum, please consider the following guidelines for appropriate web-based communications:

- Passion is great; positivity and politeness should also be in step with your passion when communicating with peers and the instructor.
- To err is human; to forgive is divine. Be gracious when others make spelling or grammatical errors.
- Even with emoticons, tone and context can often be lost in text-based communications. Keep that in mind when sharing a post that is comical or satirical.
- Respect the privacy of others. If you are sharing information of a personal nature that affects a classmate, check with that classmate before posting.
- Proofread your responses before submitting. Maintain the mindset that anything posted on the web is permanent.
- Let your instructor know if something that has been posted in our discussion forum is inappropriate or offensive to you.

BB Discussion Board Post #1: Video Introductions DUE

Group Discussion Session #1

1. Welcome and Introductions: Overview of Historical Methodology

Primary Sources: Our shop materials are primary sources – the shards of historical evidence -- whether a Supreme Court ruling or a baby’s rattle that survived from the past. The primary sources are located in your “Voices of Freedom” reader as well as the “Voices of Freedom” sections within your Give Me Liberty textbook.

Secondary Sources: Secondary sources are the interpretations about the past offered by other historians. Most of the material in Give Me Liberty is secondary.

Our shop tools include careful analysis of both primary and secondary sources combined with critical thinking to arrive at our own historical interpretations. With training and collaboration, we can then construct documented, persuasive written and oral historical arguments. We can tell credible “stories” about the past.

Historiography: We will also consider how and why particular historical interpretations have changed over time. As Richard F. Hirsch summarizes, “history often resembles an incomplete picture, using different methodologies can prove useful. Looking at history from one angle or through a certain lens might uncover part of the history of that event. But since history isn’t quite absolute, observing history through other means and perspectives can reveal aspects of the historical event that may not have been evident otherwise.”

Story: In this course, you will also have a chance to do a bit of historical storytelling yourself. Using the StoryCorp application, you will interview a family, friend or community elder to discover how their story might connect to your own, and also to the larger story of American history.
